

Man got rich thanks to his beloved oranges

Once upon a time, in England, on February, in 1904, a poor man who was called James Marmelade, like everyday, woke up in the sunshine. He had a little money but he had got a beautiful vegetable garden. He grew some salads, carrots, and zucchinis which he shared with his family but he took care of his lovely orange tree himself.

And one morning, a storm rumbled, he went out for picking up his oranges which were fallen. Unhappy, he thought about how to use his oranges which were not ripe.

He was desperate... Suddenly, he had a very good idea. He wanted to create a jam with these oranges. He peeled them, and then he crushed them. He put the mixture in a cauldron, then he poured sugar, then he mixed. He kindled the fire, and he left the cauldron fifty minutes over the fire.

After fifty minutes he took the cauldron and he let it cool for ten minutes.

At lunch, the family tasted the jam for dessert and loved it.

The youngest child said the news to the parents of his friends and so they came into his house to taste the jam. The guests loved it, and James Marmelade felt the happiness of the guests.

So, he decided to sell its marmelade in Covent Garden. His slogan was "put some sun in your life with my marmalade".